Ever since high school, I've been in love with Gabriel Sawyer, but he ignored me. Now he has the audacity to ask me to be his fake fiancée. My next-door neighbor is the Falcon's grumpy quarterback. We were close friends and I thought we had a romantic connection. He rejected me and broke my heart. Now, to please his grandmother, he proposes a fake engagement. I was shocked, and I'm not sure how to react. Faking with Gabe is wrong on so many levels. One, I don't like the spotlight that he enjoys. Two, every cell in my body wants revenge. Except for my heart, it yearns to love Gabe again. It's risky, and I'm torn between seeking payback and rekindling our love.
