Love is in the air on what should have been the perfect day for a wedding, until someone offs the wedding planner.
The wedding planner had done a great job. Predictably, he did his best to jack up the price with extras to please the mother of the bride who insisted on a traditional, monochromatic wedding. Even so, the bride prevailed, and Trina and Bill's wedding burst with color.
The victim also worked as event planner at the local country club, where he was popular with the men for his organizational skills, and with the ladies for other reasons. Due to special circumstances, a detective is called in from county to run the investigation. Everyone is treated as a suspect—including Stacie, momzilla, the wedding party, and all the guests. With happy and less happy clients, an ex-wife, and more, the suspect pool seems endless.
As the investigation goes sideways, Stacie's instincts kick in as she tries to identify the killer on her own. As a result, a series of suspicious incidents ensue with Stacie as the target. Can she figure out who killed the wedding planner?
