When a serial killer with a point to make begins to kill again, why does he focus his attention on Meredith?

Nigel Foxtan was jailed for the murder of three women. Not only was the evidence damning, but during the trial, he changed his plea to guilty. Case closed...or was it?

It's almost 20 years later, and Meredith is being taunted with more victims murdered in the same way. Foxtan claims he is innocent and wants to appeal, and Meredith has to prove they jailed the right man.

Was Foxtan innocent, or had there always been two killers? Was the original case closed too soon?

When the killer fixes his sights on Linda Callow, Hodge's friend and colleague, the stakes are raised.

Not If You Paid Me is the ninth book in the Meredith & Hodge series. If you like great storytelling, surprising plot twists, and compelling characters, then you're ready to meet Meredith and Hodge, your new favorite detective duo.
