She only feeds on those who deserve it. But what happens when the one person she loves is about to die?

Vampire Yelena Solodnikova has spent years drowning in guilt—guilt for the blood she’s spilled, and for the lover who abandoned her. Then she meets Orly Bialek—a twelve-year-old girl dying of cancer, whose supernatural drawings reveal the evil in others.

Orly draws. Yelena kills.

With Orly’s help, Yelena no longer feeds on the innocent. And in the middle of their quiet, deadly partnership, something unexpected grows.

Love.

But Orly is running out of time. And Yelena is faced with a choice she never wanted: let the girl she loves slip away, or damn her to the loveless eternity of a child vampire.

A haunting and emotionally rich dark fantasy about guilt, connection, and what we become when we’re afraid to lose the ones we love.
